Dear Attorney-General and Minister

Discriminatory WorkCover policies won't make workplaces safer

We write with grave concerns regarding the proposed amendments to WorkCover policies. While we understand the sustainability of the WorkCover scheme is crucial, this should not come at the expense of worker rights and wellbeing.

The creation of Return to Work Victoria and the implementation of Psychological Health Regulations under the Occupational Health and Safety Act 2004 (Vic) are commendable. We support these efforts and the ongoing enforcement of these standards by WorkSafe. However, elements of these proposed reforms concern us.

Equality is non-negotiable in Victoria. In many respects, Victoria leads the way in promoting equality. We are also progressing mental health reforms, including improving mental health in workplaces, following the Royal Commission into Victoria's Mental Health System. The proposed changes to limit mental injury and bullying claims are incompatible with the right to equality under the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 (Vic) and fail to meet the vision of the Royal Commission. Removing these protections will just shift the problem to other systems, such as our overburdened social security and mental health and wellbeing system. We are also concerned about the disproportionate impact that these changes may have on marginalized communities, including people with trauma, mental health issues and Aboriginal Communities.

Further primary prevention strategies, organisational incentives to reduce premiums for better performance and enhanced enforcement from WorkSafe are more sustainable approaches. If the system is broken, let's fix it. Not make the problem worse.

We look forward to working collaboratively with the Victorian Government on these reforms.
